The LANTERN

of

EASTERN HIGH SCHOOL
LANSING, MICHIGAN

Presented by the Classes of

JUNE 1951

and

JANUARY 1952

This yearbook is more than just a collection of pictures representing a period of school life. Indeed, it contains the very spirit of our school just as the name combines parts of the two words—Lansing and Eastern. In later times as we glance through this Lantern we shall be taking a glimpse of our own school days, for we shall experience once more in our memory the activities of the classrooms, the stage, the gridiron, and the auditorium. Once more we shall see our classmates enjoying the various phases of social life offered to us during the three years. As we turn the pages and look directly through the “E” which represents the halls of Eastern, we shall chuckle with remembered amusement over many ludicrous incidents and the foibles of our more entertaining fellow students. We shall gaze with a rather poignant tenderness at these symbols of friendship, romance, and understanding which make high school days such cherished ones. Thus, the Lantern will bring back the carefree days of youth when life was measured by work and play in which we learned to share our knowledge and happiness with others.

To Miss Benjamin—beloved Dean of Girls and adviser for the Honor Society and Girls' League—this 1951 Lantern is sincerely and gratefully dedicated. Miss Benjamin's understanding smile reveals the kindly and sympathetic nature which has so endeared her to the students of Eastern High School. She listens patiently to their problems, which range from the very personal to those dealing with prom favors or refreshments, for everything that concerns the students is of vital importance to her. Few people realize how often the success of a project has depended upon the skillful guidance and efficiency of our Dean of Girls.

Custodians

The cleanliness of our building is maintained by Eastern's capable custodians. J. Ommen is raking leaves, Mrs. Brundage is giving a towel to Carol Fickes, and J. Eshuk is sweeping the floor of the small auditorium.

Busy Workers

The friendly and able office staff contribute to the efficient manner in which Eastern is run. Gail Nipple is being helped by Sarah Jones, Barbara Cunningham uses the telephone, and Jo Plocharczyk assists Ed Moyer. On the right, C. Plankenhorn raises the flag.

A high-contrast, black and white photograph. A person with curly hair, wearing a light-colored, possibly white, dress or top, is seated on a wooden chair. They are leaning forward, looking intently at a large, rectangular sheet of paper that is propped up. The word "SENIORS" is printed in a bold, black, sans-serif font on the upper portion of the paper. The scene is dramatically lit from the side, creating deep shadows and bright highlights. The background is dark and indistinct. The overall mood is contemplative and focused.

SENIORS

Don Meyers and Madeline Wood casually approach Miss Toogood's lecture stand, preparing to give their speeches on which many weary hours have been spent.

Mary Ann Decker, Mary Colvin, and Edwin Garner inspect a covered wagon. This replica is part of the study of A Lantern in Her Hand.

Miss Toogood, Margaret Bannasch, and Barbara Munn stand at the theme file while Bob Stone, LaVerne Hackney, and Dan Whitney study feverishly.

Richard Hunt and Jim Yonchewski pause at the blackboard in Mrs. Athey's room. They are waiting for directions and hope they know the answers.

English

Barbara Putnam, Jo Amato, Glenn Ramey, Harriet Andree, Wayne Austin work on themes in Mr. Potter's Non-College English class.

Jack Beyerhelm, Georgia Dick, and JoEllen Dickerson appear intrigued by the pictures of William Shakespeare and his times.

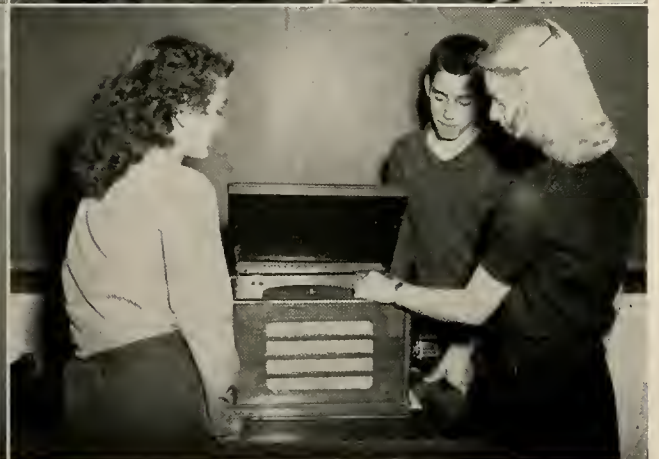

Ann Adam and Lee Benson eagerly look up a word in the dictionary, possibly for use in their themes.

Mrs. Athey helps Henry Winsett and Alice Armstrong with their themes. Reva DeZess and Donna Smith are pondering over those banned errors.

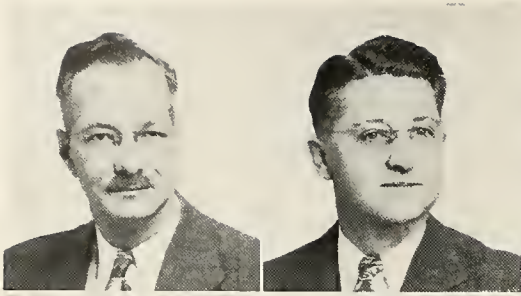

While the teacher is out of the room, Linda Marsh answers the telephone as George Grof sharpens his pencil.

Rae Jean Ballard, Jerry Bates, and Mary Benda listen to recordings of their voices in order to improve their enunciation.

Social Science

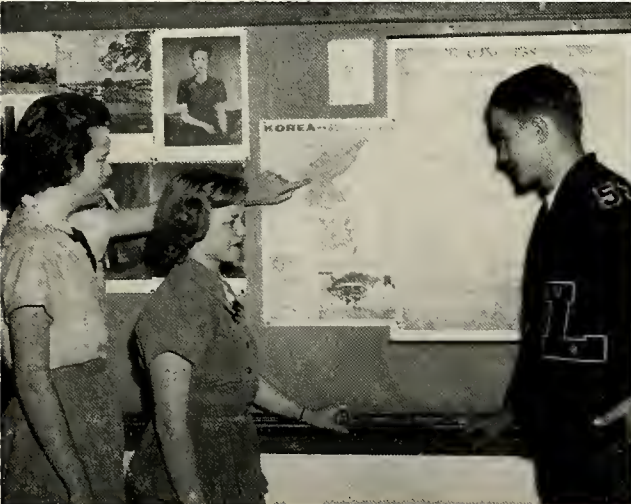

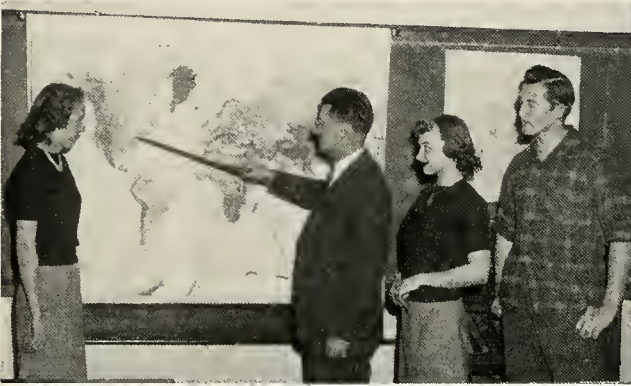

J. Brisbin
C. Hayden

R. Gilson
E. Husbeck

Cited for bravery, Dick Hewes and Leighton Tiedeman show graphically how they were outnumbered by the fairer sex. Mr. Brisbin chaperoned the group.

Janet Ginter, JoAnn Engdal, and Jerry Feldpausch listen to Mr. Gilson as he expounds the theories of international economics.

Marilyn Schuurmans, Nancy Spencer, and Dick Rom examine a map of Korea, commenting on the locale of recent Korean conflicts.

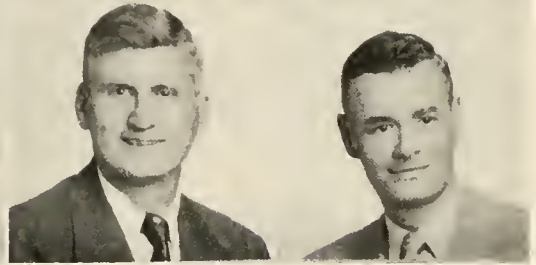

One of Mr. Husbeck's World History II classes is shown studying diligently in preparation for a forthcoming test.

In 3-75, Bev Metzger, Phyllis VanCamp, Mary Abbott, and Jackie Brown spend a few minutes reading industriously. A test, maybe?

Social Science

In Mr. Gilson's economics class, Duane Hastings points out to Joanne Summers some interesting facts concerning company profits. This is part of Eastern's visual aids program.

Sandra Jennings and Barbara Schultz are working hard on their assignment for geometry. Perhaps a late date last night!

Puzzled by a geometric problem, Barbara Wooten seeks Mr. Morrison's advice on the stickler. 'Tis a smart girl who asks the teacher.

R. Schneider

In the upper picture, Alice Jacobson points out some fine points in trig. to Calista Steadman and Mary Abbott in Mr. Schneider's room.

In the lower picture, Mr. Van Vliet shows Mary Ann Daugherty and Richard Johnson the method of proving a problem without leaving the shadow of a doubt in the process.

Science

Harry, I've certainly enjoyed having you in class also in A.R. I only wish that

I might have had the pleasure of knowing you much sooner

Best wishes for a wonderful future m. d. p.

Caroline Anderson demonstrates the scientific method of making coffee to Barbara Sherman and Larry Johnson.

Joyce Adadow, Roger Preuss, and Doris Paddison are caught in the midst of an experiment in Mr. Douglas' laboratory.

Roger Stephens, Joan Valleau, and JoAnn Clark compare notes in the back of the French room before class.

In Spanish class, Carol Anderson and Bob Mermelstein examine a chart of Mexico. Are they planning a trip?

Romans Bob Walters, Tom Pulice, Gordon Spink, and Chuck Brownell cluster about Harriet Lee. These legionnaires on leave are checking the local female population.

Sylvia Hatter and Carol Terkelsen scrutinize an exhibit of early Roman carts in Miss Smith's room. These models were made by students and illustrate Roman culture.

Library

Irvin Eyre, Delores Wade, and Arol Fast are looking for some reference material for their history class. Delores seems to have found something very interesting, and the boys are eager to share her discovery.

Phyllis Detzler points out some places on the globe to Melvin Alspaugh. She is relating her experiences on the Isle of Capri with a rich prince. Well, she can dream, can't she?

Library period! This shows a class that knows how to use the library. They have their material and are working.

A. Pear

L. Arnell

Rita Plocharczyk and Dottie Van Sickle are checking out some material for over-night reading. Extra credit, you know!

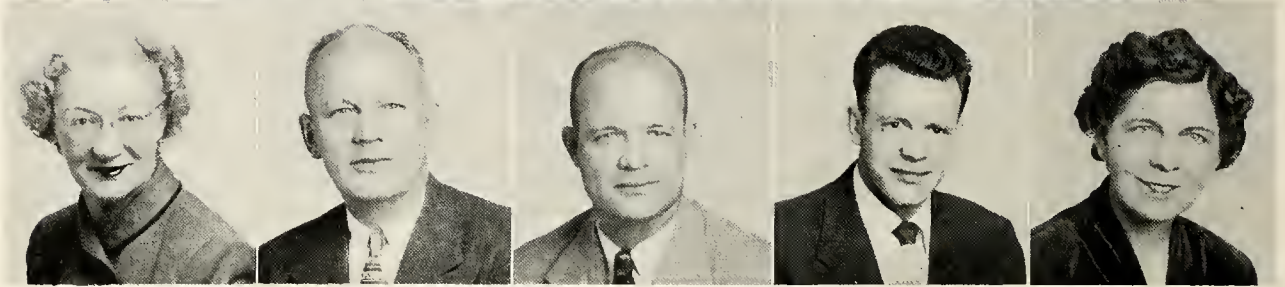

Anna Lou Stevens and Sarah Hayden are exploring the Readers' Guides for pertinent material which they might use in their assignments. When they become seniors, they will no doubt be thankful for this practice.

Barbara Hammond, Tom Wood, and Dick Whiting are looking through the card catalog for books which will help them in their reports. They seem to be enjoying themselves; perhaps they are thinking of that "A" for extra credit work.

Phillip Hassler checks his books against those of Peggy Johnson, Mary Trayer, and Doris Hobbs. Could this be preparatory to the auditing by their instructor?

Joyce Ash and Marilyn Hodge get some practical experience in the fine art of filing, which is essential in any modern business office. After all, records are important.

Howard Hall and Sharon Christopher seek Mr. Simpson's advice on a technicality which they have discovered in commercial law.

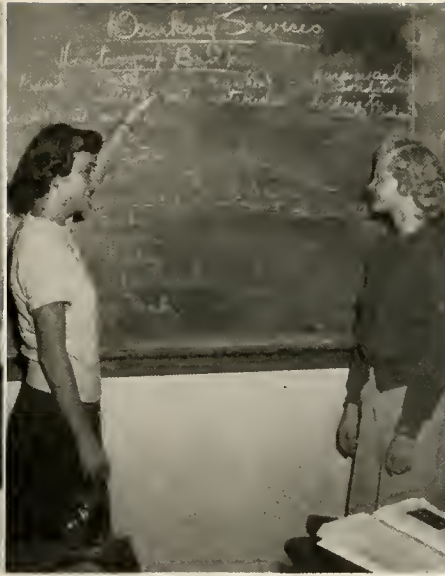

Pat McLaughlin uses the stenography hour to give Mary Jean Traver some practical experience in the field of dictation.

Commercial

Marlene Swan and Rachel Leiby go to the board in business organization class.

Maxine Montgomery does some fancy figuring at the calculating machine.

Looking into the typing room, we find Barbara Russo, Joyce Whitney, Norrine Foster, and Iris Lawrence slaving over their hot and smoking typewriters.

Are Jeannie Farmer and Virginia Hatter checking on Joyce Doran's style, or are they just attempting to bother the poor girl? Perhaps they see that the typewriter is running out of ribbon.

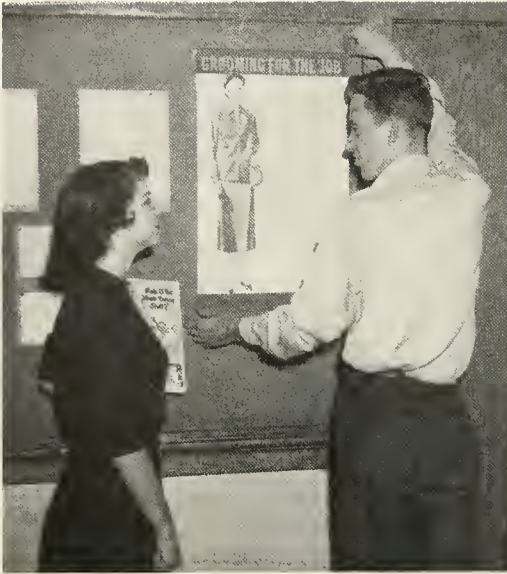

A busy office in downtown Lansing? No, just Arlene Seely, Virginia Wright, and Marie Baker doing some transcribing from their shorthand pads in stenography class. They will be in an office in the near future.

Irene Mondoskin, Marley Hatt, Carole Vance, Bev Ulrey, and Marion Warner go into conference in commercial law class. Although outnumbered, Marley seems to enjoy the discussion on the legal loop-holes.

Retailing

Helen DuBois helps Arnold Perkins put up a chart in the retailing room to point out the relationship of good grooming to keeping a job.

Retailing

Eastern is noted for its cooperative retailing program. Through this plan, pupils get an initiation into the business life of the community. Here are some illustrations of that program.

At upper left is Kathleen Bischoff as she works behind the lunch counter in the Kresge dime store.

At upper right is Sandra Van Peenen. She has secured a berth with the Van Peenen Flower Shop. Here she makes one of those all-important contacts with a prospective customer.

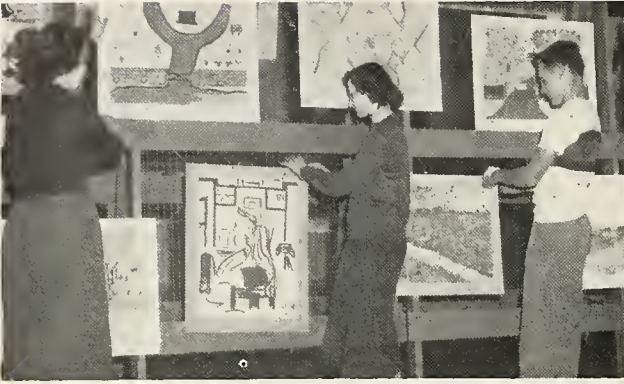

At lower left Harold Pierce is shown checking a customer through the line at the South Washington branch of the Kroger stores. This job is helpful in math courses.

At lower right is Byrl Brewer as he prints a sign for the F. N. Arbaugh Company. He works in the display department as is indicated by the sign which he has just finished printing.

Art

Zarada Gunter, Ellen Cheney, and Doug Cole are putting paintings on display in the corridor outside the art room.

Richard Gilby, Harriet Andree

Zarada Gunter, Ellen Cheney, and Carol Hillman are shown bent over their drawings.

Doris Kribs, Lois Bushee, and Dick Shader carefully plan interesting and intricate designs.

Sculptors Shirley Wilkins and Margaret Stevenson find that they enjoy molding clay.

Kay Hamilton works with oils on an easel in the art room.

Harold Pardee and Ted Kingsley show skilled craftsmanship as they admire their handiwork in leather.

Drafting and Printing

Hugh Pratt is shown at the blueprint washer. This future draftsman will necessarily have to know this machine intimately if he is to make blueprints.

Bill Baxter and Dave Harris stand at the blueprinter. This machine prints the image on the paper with a strong arc light, a process similar to printing photographs.

T. Clark

B. Eldred

Jack DeVet and Russ Harry hold a conference to discuss the proper angle to use on their work.

Alan Kueper has just finished a job and is running it through the proof press.

The hour has just begun as Dean Webb gets his drafting instruments from the cupboard.

Richard Ferris busily feeds a press in the print shop. Is he a printer's devil?

Bob Laderoot and Lyle Johnson have their assignments and are at work at the cases.

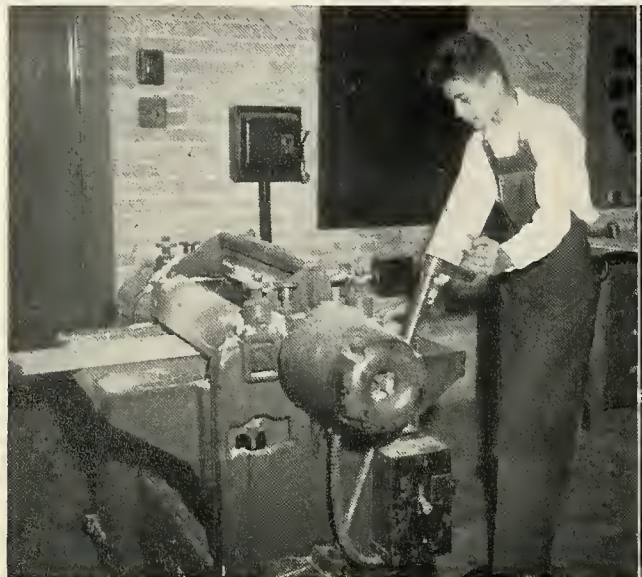

Woodworking and Industrial Arts

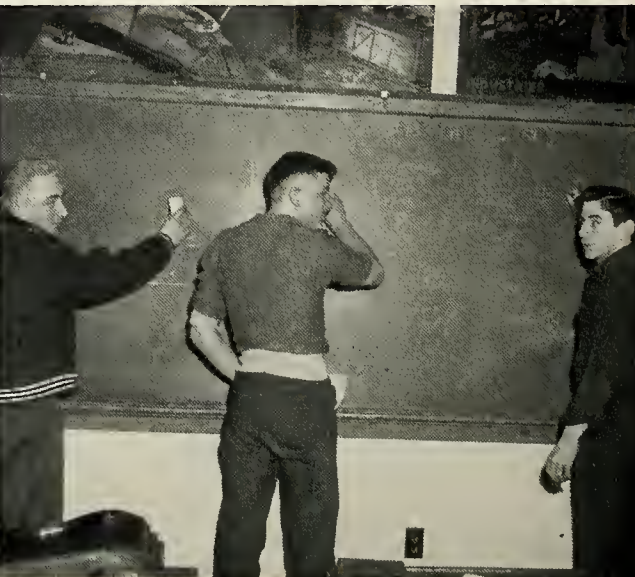

Gus Mayers illustrates the right way to use a band saw. This machine cuts through wood as if it were butter.

Bill Waters and Larry Schwartzman are busy sanding and planing a boat in the wood shop.

Wesley Dorin is concentrating on squaring a board in the very efficient planer to be found in the wood shop.

Ron Lundberg, Henry Dreps, and Edwin Garner are caught by the camera while they are at the board in their Industrial English class. The boys are studying machine shop terms which they will be using soon.

F. Austin

O. Flory

R. Tuttle

Gerald Medler, Bill Lemm, and Marvin Lawrence show their intense interest in Industrial English as they study their assignments for the following day. This particular course gives the students training in practical English.

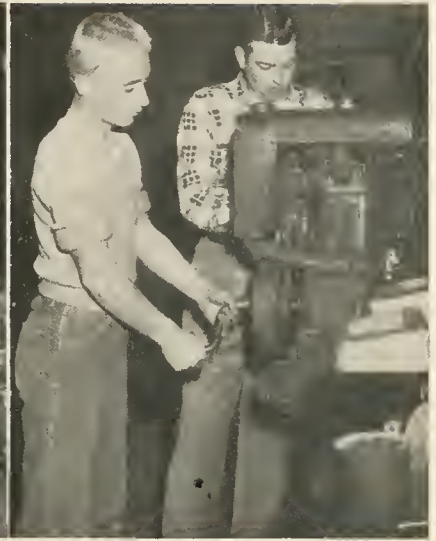

Auto and General Metals

In the auto shop Norman Farr works a shaper, which is being used to true up the end of a piece of stock.

John Hackett is fixing a scooter as part of his work in general metal. This is an example of many outside jobs done here.

Ron Lundberg and Roger Stuart examine an old engine and are noting the odd design of this motor made originally in Lansing.

Douglas Ayies and Chuck Baxter work at a metal roller, used in shaping sheet metal.

Ralph Oppen, Martin Shepard, and Donald Penoyer do some practical work in the line of elementary electrical wiring.

Henry Winsett examines the brake assembly, Russell Woodworth tinkers with the differential, and Bob Schaible gives a glance to the wheel assembly. These boys enjoy their course with Mr. Spitler, who gives them an opportunity to apply their learning.

HOMECOMING DANCE

Former graduates of Eastern High School sponsored a homecoming dance following the football game between Eastern and Ann Arbor. A highlight of their dance was the coronation of a homecoming queen. Maxine Montgomery, Virginia Wright, Phyllis Sidoti, Marian Pierson, Norma Page, and Patricia Moffitt were selected by their respective classes as candidates. These girls were presented to the student body during an assembly on the Friday morning preceding the game. Following the assembly, the entire student body voted to select the queen whose identity was revealed at the dance. Mrs. Russel Moore, Eastern Alumni association president, officially crowned Virginia Wright. Miss Wright was presented with a gift from the Alumni association. Wayne Bancroft, a member of the 1935 graduating class, donated flowers for the queen and her court.

Virginia Wright was presented with a bouquet of flowers by Mrs. Russel Moore after being crowned queen.

DEBATE RECORD

The topic for debate this year was "Resolved: That the American people should reject the welfare state."

Eastern debaters participated in both the general league and the 5-A League. In the general league schedule, Eastern won seven out of eight debates. They won four out of eight 5-A League debates.

The Quaker debaters qualified for the state elimination tournament for the thirteenth successive year. Ed Moyer and Jack Subar debated both sides. In the first round, they defeated Farmington High School while upholding the affirmative side. They lost a two-to-one decision to Hazel Park while debating the negative side. This gave Eastern a final record of twelve victories and six defeats.

Eastern High School was awarded a University of Michigan Excellence in Debating award.

Girls' Sports

Miss Hatch

The Girls' Athletic Association and regular physical education classes co-operate to make sports a worthwhile pastime. In addition to the routine ball playing and swimming, dancing and tumbling also give girls a chance to exercise their physical ability. Health-education classes are included to complete a most enjoyable round of pleasure.

Standing: Marie Terranova, treasurer; Elaine Emmons, secretary.
Seated: Marcia Bellville, vice-president; Elaine Jennings, president.

Marian Pierson and Janet Davis are trying their hand at ping pong, an activity enjoyed by all the girls.

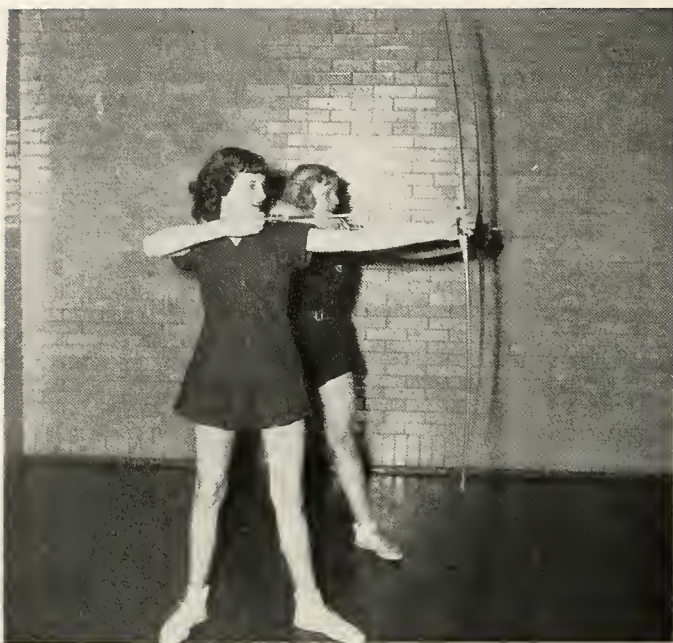

Badminton is a favorite sport of G.A.A. Joylyn Kennedy and Joyce Culy are taking an active part in this game.

Gloria McKay busily decorates for "Carnival Capers," after-game dance sponsored by G.A.A.

Girls' Sports

Archery, a fall sport, is one of G.A.A.'s activities not carried on in gym classes. JoAnne Alexander and Pat Comstock demonstrate the proper stance.

Dancing is held on Friday in girls' gym classes. Sandra Jennings and Joyce Holland are showing how it should be done.

Bowling

Bowling team captains, Vertia Wood, Billie Cramer, Sue Brock, Janet Davis, Betty Smith, and Carol Steadman check the score sheet to see the high scores that have been made throughout the games of the day. The girls in the Bowling League bowl every Wednesday.

Jackie Randall, Phyllis Sidoti, Louann Whitcomb, Betty Plowman, Joan Hanes, and Margaret Stevenson, the rest of the bowling captains in the league, examine the ball in preparation for their games that they will soon begin.

Debbie McKeel's team mates watch in silent admiration as she prepares to throw the bowling ball swiftly and smoothly. Surely nothing less than a strike could result from all the determination pictured on Debbie's face. Bowling is an optional sport in the curriculum of girls' sports. It is not a regular activity of either gym classes or Girls' Athletic Association.

Secretary Marilyn Smith, president Marie Terranova, and treasurer Carol Steadman clean a bowling ball as they very seriously discuss their efficient organization, the Girls' Bowling League. The girls do their best to keep the League functioning smoothly.

Girls' Sports

Cheerleading is an essential part of Eastern's sports program. Mary Hefty and Darlyn Smith carry out their version of the yell "Come on, team, fight," which is known to every sports fan in Eastern.

Throughout the fall season, girls look forward to basketball, a winter sport, which is a favorite of all. In the background, JoAnne Alexander, Sandra Schaible, and Joylyn Kennedy scramble madly for the ball. Pat Tavenner, Anna Lou Stevens, Nancy DeWilde, and Gloria McKay in the foreground also fight to recover the ball as it bounces from the backboard after a wild shot for a basket.

Eight girls make up the feminine half of the cheerleading team. Barbara Stone and Pat Tavenner are demonstrating the familiar yell "Left and Right."

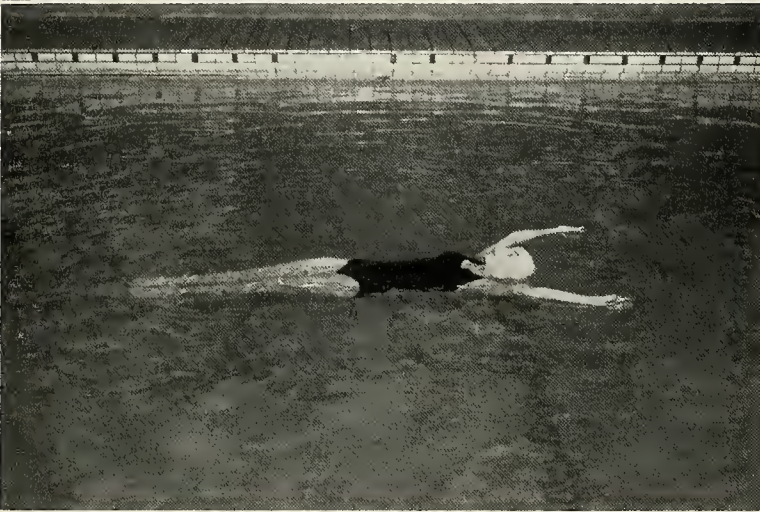

Volleyball, a game played in all seasons, is a favorite activity of G.A.A. and also of the gym classes. Because the classes are so large, they are divided into three or four groups, giving everyone a chance to participate. The blowing of referees' whistles and the yelling of the girls deafen the spectators but not the team members, Nadine Tyler, Betty Shepler, Darlene Dietz, and Maureen Hammond, who eagerly await the return of the ball that they have just served to the opposite side.

Swimming

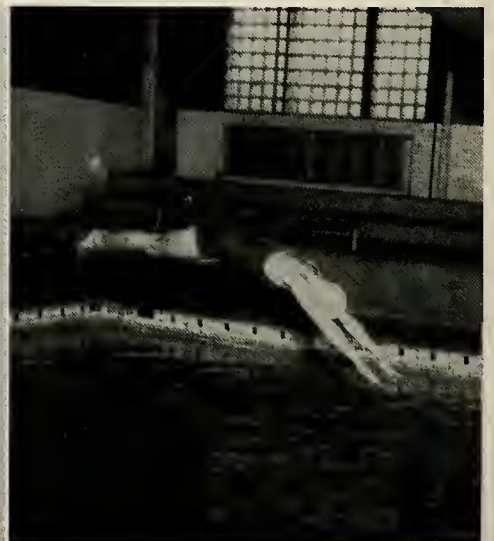

Usually one thinks of the ballet in terms of beautifully executed pantomimes performed with elaborate scenery and accompanied by fitting music which weaves its melodies throughout the action. Marie Terranova, however, proves that a water ballet can be just as graceful and striking as that of the stage.

Since most of us are looking for a perfect method of relaxation, let us consider the particularly appealing plan chosen by Joan Boettcher. Completely at ease and without a care in the world, she floats contentedly in the Eastern pool.

A gracefully turning wheel, typical of the formation seen at the Water Show, is created by Judy Haga, Katy Bond, Joan Boettcher, Marie Terranova, and Nancy Marlatt.

Katy Bond does a trim front dive. Girls exercise their swimming knowledge during the regular Wednesday and Thursday physical education periods.

Executive Staff — 1951

This busy group is discussing the possibility of producing a Lantern which will be "bigger and better" than that of previous years.

Seated: Jack Crittenden, Vivian Maltin, Philip Palmer, Marcia Bellville

Standing: Miss Lowrey, Mr. Peterman, Miss Richards

Absent: Shirley Schultz

Appreciation

The Lantern staff of 1951 wishes to thank Miss Lowrey, editorial adviser; Mr. Peterman, financial adviser; and Miss Richards, art adviser, for their willing cooperation and unselfish contribution of time and energy.
